Evidence?

This feels like a great way for students to lead the conference rather than it being teacher driven alone

Are students required to fill out the conferring sheet prior to speaking w/ a teacher?

I wonder if a section that says "I would like some help with... would help with the process?

How do you modify your notes for students with varied means of accessing curriculum - techology? devices?

Is there a way to hold students accountable to what they say they are going to do "next-time?"

CONFERRING AS AN ASSESSMENT TOOL

By Elizabeth, Ruth, Erica & Alice

BACKGROUND

Through both our work with Carl Anderson and study of his conferring techniques, we created a modified kid-friendly student conference sheet.

OBJECTIVES

- Creating entry points into the conference
- To facilitate students' ability in taking ownership of the conferring process.
- Increasing efficiency of each conference by having students reflect upon their work, including next steps.

OUTCOMES & FINDINGS

- Quick way to create and pull groups based upon what strategies they want to try and/or work on.
- Able to meet and confer with more students, given the same amount of time.

Conferring Group – Notes
May 4th, 2015

We talked about wanting to have conferring sheets that were easy for us to use, as well as the idea of creating a student conference goal sheet. The kids would use this as a way to have a focus ahead of time for their writing conferences with their teacher.
This was inspired by some of Carl Andersons work.

We set a goal of trying out the sheet before our next meeting on the 18th.

Conferring Group – Notes
May 18th, 2015

Possible Next Steps:

- Organize conferring sheets into small groups based on what they want to work on in their writing; i.e. personification in poetry. Then follow up individually.

- Entry point into the conference could be what they feel good about, and then work from there.

- The students were specific, but the group thought that a revised sheet might be more beneficial. We are creating one that asks the students to reflect on "Why?" for each section as well.
